

MINI ECHO

Why do writers constantly feel cold?
 What do you call a cow on a trampoline?

STORY HOUR

Rosh Hashanah was quickly approaching and there was no sign of land. The great Rabbi and his students were on board a ship in the midst of the ocean. Resigned, they began to prepare to spend the holy day at sea.

It was the first night of Rosh Hashanah when a great storm broke out. The winds were howling. The waters were choppy. The waves were threatening to overturn the ship. "All hands on deck," screamed the captain, as all the sailors raced to their emergency positions to do whatever they could to stabilize the boat and bale out the water. It seemed like it would be just a matter of time until the ship would sink.

In the meantime, the Rabbi was deeply engrossed in his Rosh Hashanah tefillos in his cabin. As the danger was mounting, his students entered the cabin to inform him. But they backed away when they saw the fervor and intensity of his prayers. They tried again, but once more, they wouldn't dare disturb him. When they felt that the ship was on the verge of sinking, they had no choice but to interrupt the davening. When the Rabbi heard the news, he calmly said, "If so, then let us fulfil one final mitzvah while we are still alive. Let's go ahead and blow the shofar." The Rabbi brought the shofar to his lips and with intense concentration, started blowing the kolos. Their sounds seemed to have pierced the winds and the very heavens – because as he blew, the storm abated, until the final teкия גדולה, when the waters were calm and still.

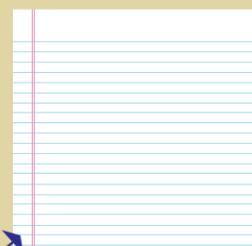

The captain and sailors could not believe it. They followed their ears and raced down to the Rabbi's cabin. They hugged and kissed him and thanked him profusely for saving the ship. They offered to buy his powerful 'instrument' for a huge sum of money. The Rabbi smiled and explained to them that the instrument itself was just a simple ram's horn – but it was the power of the mitzvah that saved them.

The Shofar Miracle

Tic-Tac-Toe

Can you find the winner of this tic-tac-toe game?

That is, the one line that has three identical images.

Can you redraw the 'Back to School' scene on this paper?

DOUBLE CLUES

Can you fill in the grid using the clues and the pair of words that are anagrams to the answer? When all of the letters are filled in correctly, the center column reading down will reveal a bonus word.

T
	T
		T
			T
				T
					T
						T

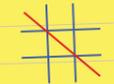

- | | |
|---------------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Narrow or limit | HINT + GET |
| 2. Moral | LIT + ACHE |
| 3. External to | DO + SUITE |
| 4. Unbearable pain | TRUE + ROT |
| 5. Helter-skelter | CHIC + OAT |
| 6. Money tithed | HIT + RACY |
| 7. Spare job? | STAY + BIB |

Solved

- Bonus-HISTORY
1. tighten, 2. ethical,
 3. outside, 4. torture,
 5. chaotic, 6. charity,
 7. babysit

Double Clues:

Tic-Tac-Toe:

A milkshake.

They are surrounded by drafts.

Jokes: